

THE LOST SISTER—INFLUENCE OF CHRISTIAN CIVILIZATION UPON THE SOCIAL AFFECTIONS.

The following interesting narrative was communicated to the Philadelphia North American.

Valley of Wyoming

After the battle and massacre, described in my last, most of the settlers fled. But here and there a straggler returned from the mountain of wilderness, and in the course of three or four months, cabins were going up over the ashes of their former homes, and quite a little neighborhood was collected. But the Indians kept prowling around on the mountains, now descending here and now there, killing this family, scalping that or making it captive. At a little distance from the present Court-house at Wilkesbarre lived a family by the name of Selocum, upon whom the visitations of the Indians' cruelties were awfully severe. The men were one day away in the fields, and in an instant the house was surrounded by Indians. There was in it, the mother, a daughter about nine years of age, a son aged thirteen, another daughter aged five, and a little boy aged two and a half. A young man, and a boy by the name of Kingsley were present grinding a knife. The first thing the Indians did was to shoot down the young man and scalp him with the knife which he had in his hand. The nine-year-old sister took the little boy two years and a half old, and ran out of the back door to get to the fort. The Indians chased her just enough to see her flight, and having a hearty laugh as she ran and clung to the little boy, she hid in his hand. The nine-year-old sister took the little boy two years and a half old, and ran out of the back door to get to the fort. The Indians chased her just enough to see her flight, and having a hearty laugh as she ran and clung to the little boy, she hid in his hand. The nine-year-old sister took the little boy two years and a half old, and ran out of the back door to get to the fort. The Indians chased her just enough to see her flight, and having a hearty laugh as she ran and clung to the little boy, she hid in his hand.

They asked her what her Christian name was? She could not remember. Was it Frances? She smiled and said "yes."—It was the first time she heard it pronounced for 60 years! Here, then, they were met—two brothers and two sisters! They were all satisfied that they were brothers and sisters. But what a contrast! The brothers were walking the cabin unable to speak; the oldest sister was weeping, but the poor Indian sister sat motionless and passionless, as indifferent as a spectator. There was no throbbing no fine cords in her bosom to be touched.

When Mr. Selocum was giving me this his story, I said to him—"But could she not speak English?" "No—a word." "Did she know her age?" "No—had no idea of it." "But was she entirely ignorant?" "Sir, she did not know when Sunday comes!" "This was indeed the consummation of ignorance in a descendant of the Puritans! But what a picture for a painter would be the inside of that cabin have afforded.—Here were the children of civilization, respectable, temperate, intelligent, and wealthy, able to overcome mountains to recover their sister. There was the child of the forest, not able to tell the day of the week, whose views and feelings were all confined to that cabin. Her whole history might be old in a word. She lived with the Delawares who carried her off, till she grew up, and then married a Delaware. He either died or ran away, and she then married a Miami Indian, a chief as I believe. She has two daughters, both of whom are married, and who live in all the glory of an Indian cabin, deer-skin clothes, and cow-skin head dresses. No one of the family can speak a word of English. They have horses in abundance, and when the Indian sister wanted to accompany her new relatives, she whipped out and bridled her horse, and then, a la Turk, mounted astride and was off. At night she could throw a blanket around her, down upon the floor, and at once be asleep.

The brothers and sister tried to persuade the little sister to return with them, and if she desired it, bring her children.—They would transport her again to the banks of the Susquehanna, and of their wealth make her home happy. But no. She had always lived with the Indians,—they had always been kind to her, and she had promised her late husband and his dear-bred child she would never leave the Indians. And there they left her and hers, wild and darkened heathens, though sprung from a pious race. You can hardly imagine how much this brother is in dread of her.—He says he means this autumn to go again that long journey to see his tawny sister—to carry her some presents; will go and petition Congress that if ever these Miami are driven off, there may be a tract of land reserved for his sister and her descendants! His heart yearns with an indescribable tenderness for the poor helpless one, who 61 years ago, was torn from the arms of her mother. Mysterious Providence! How wonderful the tie which can thus bind a family together with a chain so strong that no living can break its links!

I will only add that nothing has ever been heard of the boy Kingsley. The probability certainly is that he is not living. This account, hastily and imperfectly given I had from the lips of Mr. Selocum, the brother, and the same who was two and a half years old when little Frances was carried away. I believe that I have altered nothing, though I have omitted enough to make the good part of an interesting volume. Civiz.

THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN AN IRRELIGIOUS AND A RELIGIOUS OLD AGE.

It is a sad thing, to see an old man, as a sinner;—one, who has all his life, been quenching the Spirit of God, and doing despite to it;—one, who has been, all his life, sinning up his heart against the quiet roads of grace;—one, who has, all his life, been hardening his heart; and treasuring to himself his own wrath;—to see such an one stand, in his honourable grey hairs, un-honoured and alone; a thing, on which the glow of heaven never lights; which the free and glad strivings of the Spirit now never visit and quicken. It is a sad thing, to see such an one, waiting for his setting time; not like the shock of corn in its ripeness, but like a withered and blasted tree, tottering to its fall. It is a piteous thing, to see a worldly old man, come to that season, when there is no pleasure even in his poor and only pleasures; when the feeble and palsied limbs can ply no more in their wonted tasks, their toil, their hurry, their business; when he is past all the uses of earth, and has not made himself fit for any of it or better. And this is said to behold, what is it to be felt? What shall be the thoughts of the soul and the worldly of old man, as, day after day, hour after hour, brings him nearer to the end of his appointed day for all living? What shall soothe his wearied spirits, what strengthen him to bear the feebleness of body, the pangs of infirmity, the decay of nature, the struggle of death? What shall employ his long vacant hours? What busy rest to cheer his vacant thoughts? Fear must come to one; but hope, that comes to all, comes not to either.

But this is not so with the Christian old man. Broken, worn, feeble, fast sinking to the grave in body; but his soul, it might seem, with all the wrath of God within, he has all the peace of God within. Desires, fears, passions, have all died away; and in the deep recesses of his soul, he hears the voice of the Lord God speaking to him. He hath known in part only; as yet he hath seen only "through a glass darkly." And he desires the day, when he shall know as he is known, and shall see face to face. He stands at the grave and gate of death, with that fear indeed, which man's fallen nature must ever feel, at the thought of that fell struggle; but he knows that the gate of death is to him the gate to life, the gate to knowledge, and the gate to rest. He said then, as "I would not live away;" for the corruptible body weigheth down the mind, and keeps it from the full vision of that glory which shall be from the full enjoyment of that rest which remaineth for the people of God. And so he pass the short time of his sojourning here in calm hope; and possess his soul in patience. The Saviour who hath cheered and comforted him for so many years, leaves him not, neither forsakes him, in the day of his death, and the hour of his death; but leads him, by quiet and easy steps, in the sense of God's comforting presence, to his end. Once again, when he departs, he desires to partake of that high communion of his Saviour's body and blood; which hath been his best comfort, and best strength, below; and here indeed, he feels God manifesting Himself to his soul; renewing all his promises, now near at hand to be fulfilled; strengthening him against the hour of death; and freeing him from the fear of judgment. "I have waited, O Lord," he says as he expires, "for thy salvation! I fear no evil now, for thou art with me! Thy rod and thy staff they comfort me."—Rev. Hugh James Rose.

THE FORCE OF TRUTH.

A gentleman was once asked in company what led him to embrace the truths of the Gospel, which formerly he was known to have neglected and despised! He said, "My call and conversion to God my Saviour, were produced by very singular means; a person put into my hands "Paine's Age of Reason." I read it with attention, and was much struck with the strong and ridiculous representation he made of many passages in the Bible. I confess to my shame, I had never read the Bible through; but from what I remember to have heard at Church, and accidentally on other occasions, I could not persuade myself that Paine's report was quite exact, or that the Bible was quite so absurd as he represented it. I resolved, therefore, that I would read the Bible regularly through, and compare the passages which I had done so, that I might give the Bible for play. Accordingly I set myself to the task, and as I advanced, I was struck with the majestic words, the awfulness of the truths contained in it, and the exceeding greatness of its divine origin, which increased with every page, so that I finished my inquiry with the fullest satisfaction of its truth as in Jesus, and my heart was penetrated with a sense of obligation I had never felt before. I resolved henceforth to take the sacred word for my guide, and to be a faithful follower to the Son of God.

PROSPECTUS OF THE FARMERS' GAZETTE AND CHERAW ADVERTISER.

The Editor of the Cheraw Gazette has determined, at the suggestion of the Peck Dee Agricultural Society, to devote more space than formerly to Agriculture, and matters pertaining specially to its interests. About nine columns, or a page and a half weekly, will be occupied with this subject, except when it shall be necessary to make room for Executive Messages, and a few other political papers such as every intelligent citizen ought to read. A large proportion of what shall appear under the Agricultural head must, of course, be selected. But the numerous Agricultural periodicals now published in this country afford abundant and excellent materials for selection; and, after a short time, the reports, and other papers of the Peck Dee Agricultural Society will of themselves form an immense and valuable body of original matter, all of it adapted particularly to the part of the country. And it is hoped, also, that among the numerous intelligent and enterprising planters of the surrounding districts and counties some may be found who will, occasionally, take the trouble of contributing to the columns of the paper the result of their experience. Among the subjects which will engage the Editor's attention the culture of silk shall not be overlooked. Ample instructions will be given, in their proper season, for cultivating the morus multicaulis and making silk. The paper will espouse the cause of no party in politics, but shall contain an impartial summary of political intelligence, and, occasionally, able speeches and well written essays (when met with) fairly discussing the principles and measures of all parties. It is believed that a comparatively small space devoted to political subjects in this way may be made more profitable to the Farmer of domestic habits, who wishes to be acquainted with the true state of the country and qualified for a proper and intelligent discharge of the duties of citizenship, than a whole sheet filled, from week to week, and year to year, with one-sided discussions, and the mere quarrels of editors and politicians;—whilst, at the same time, it will not be calculated to estrange neighbor from neighbor, or to mislead into a belief that one half of the country are lost partisans to the other, or less ardently attached to our republican institutions.

So much of the fourth page as shall not be occupied with standing advertisements will generally be filled up with matter of moral and religious cast, and articles conducive, in other respects, to proper family instruction and family discipline.

If the increase to the subscription list upon issuing this Prospectus shall be sufficient to warrant the expense, a new type will be procured, forthwith, for the body of the paper; that for the part now printed in large letters; and at the commencement of the next volume the title of the paper will be changed to Farmers' Gazette and Cheraw Advertiser. For Terms see first page. September, 1839.

Strayed.

FROM the subscribers plantation in Welsh Neck, Marlborough District on Wednesday night 21st Nov. 1839, a chestnut sorrel mare, 2 years old, tolerable well grown, small legs—has been wagoned some; to other flesh marks recollect at present. For Sale.

LARGE Maps of Mississippi and Alabama, showing the Public and Indian Lands, Indian Reservations, Land Districts, Townships &c. engraved from the Governments surveys and plats in the General Land Office, Washington City, by E. C. Menden, draughtsman in the General Land Office.

F. Taylor, book seller, Washington City, has just published (and secured the copy right according to law) the above Maps, which will be found infinitely more complete and accurate than any heretofore published. They are printed on separate sheets, each containing nearly six square feet, and will be found especially useful and valuable to those interested in the lands of either State as they show every item of information which is in possession of the Land Office relative to water courses, townships, Indian Land and Reservations, Land Districts, &c. and will be found perfectly accurate and precise in those points. They can be sent by mail to any part of the United States, subject to single letter postage. PRICE two dollars, or three copies of either will be sent by mail for 5 dollars. A liberal discount will be made to travelling agents or to any who will buy to sell again.

Editors of newspapers any where, who will give the above advertisement (including this notice) one or two insertions, shall receive by return mail a copy of each map, if they will send a copy of the paper containing it, to the advertiser. November 2, 1839.

For Sale,

15,000 Morus Multicaulis Trees, 250,000 Cuttings. Also, 500,000 SILK WORM EGGS. The above Trees and Cuttings are very fine, and warranted to be the genuine Morus Multicaulis; some of the trees are seven feet high; the cuttings are from trees of one, two and three years old, well ripened wood, one bud to each cutting. The eggs are of the kind which produce white and yellow cocoons—mostly white—and a part of them raised from the second crop this year.

Orders for any of the above, addressed to me, will be punctually attended to, and filled in the order in which they are received; but, first come first served. It is desirable that applications be made before the first of November next, as about that time I will commence preparing my ground and planting the next year's crop. Sales made at the current prices at the time of delivery. A communication made to me on the subject of the Silk Culture, will be promptly answered. HUGH CLARK, Chest. Feb. 12, 1839. 42 1t
